« ? » The writer doubts that Mrs. Scott-Siddons will ever become a great actress. Has said all he could in her favor in his notices because he doesn't think an influential journal should be "arrayed in arms against a woman." Says that Mrs. Scott-Siddons was not a success in New York. She should not have appeared at the New York Theatre. Talked to a Mr. Webb about Planchette. Mr. Webb claimed that Planchette showed only what was in the operator's mind.

To Francis Jackson

[Middleborough, Mass.] The writer has been able to collect next to nothing. There is little true anti-slavery spirit in the town. The wealthy and influential are generally opposed to it, and the claims of charities and the support of religious institutions make it hard to collect for the slave. The writer thinks that an efficient lecturer might rouse anti-slavery feelings, and hopes that a recently erected chapel will be used for the purpose.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Manchester, Mass.» The writer, having talked with individuals friendly to the cause, doubts if anything of consequence can be done here at the present season. Mentions as a reason the "trying time for persons engaged in business 1837 to 43." In the efforts made in the last season, "one half of the amount was borne by one individual."
